For those of you that never used a contact list app, it surprisingly feels just like any other phone app. With the exception that you can save lists and pick up where you left off. The central "hub," as Apple calls it, makes connecting with friends and people easy. From within the hub, you can see your contact list; tap a name and it'll show you that person's profile and any recent conversation you might have; just swiping right brings up your recent contacts; and launching a photo will bring up all of that person's recent pictures.
