LEGACY OF MURDER Legacy of Murder by Jon Cypher, BRADLEY SCHOOL MAGAZINE A Legacy Of Murder In a week's time, we'll be celebrating the start of the 2012 school year. For most of us, it's a time of excitement, but not all of us are thrilled about the past, which leaves the future a bit blank. According to the U.S. census bureau, we're told that about 500 children are murdered each year before they reach the age of 18. By many accounts, nearly all of these killings are done by a relative or close friend. We don't know if this is true, or if it is, how valid this statistic is. However, I came across this statistic and found it staggering. A Legacy Of Murder This means about 5.5 children are murdered each day. But why are they murdered? There's no easy answer to this question. It's a crime we can't fully comprehend and at the same time, there are few, if any, who can do anything about it. But that doesn't mean we can't try. The number of child murderers is
